

Manuela Mari is associate professor of Greek History at the University of Cassino and Southern Latium (Italy). Her main research interests are the history, cults and institutions of Macedonia; the relationships between Panhellenic sanctuaries and regional areas; the classical and hellenistic historiography (more particularly: Thucydides, the historians of Alexander the Great, Timaeus, Polybius); the economy of ancient societies. She has published, among other things, a volume on the relationship between Macedonia and the Panhellenic sanctuaries (Al di là dell'Olimpo, 2002); a series of articles on the history and institutions of Amphipolis from the foundation to the Roman period; some essays on the archaic colonization; she has also co-edited a volume on the Hellenistic political language (Parole in movimento, 2013).
